Have you ever had problems finding a parking space for your car? It happens to all of us. Developers in Singapore have come up with an idea that may help you, but I have to say it's incredibly expensive. It's on-suite sky-garages for those who can afford to park right up there beside their living rooms in skyscrapers. You just steer into the car lift which speeds you right up to your apartment, let's say on the 55th floor. Quite the idea, mm-hmm.

Austrian hazardous materials, that is hazmat specialists, were called in after Geiger counters showed alarmingly high readings for a dump truck arriving at a garbage handling site. After unloading the truck, firefighters from the hazardous materials unit found nearly two dozen adult diapers that had become contaminated with radioactive iodine at a hospital. This substance is swallowed by patients during some medical procedures. The truck and the diapers will stay in a special metal building at the garbage handling unit for eight days — the time it takes for the emissions to reach safe levels. Someone might venture to claim that all diapers should be handled by hazmat teams!

In Amsterdam, the Rainbow Group runs a program for people with severe drinking problems. They are paying alcoholics in beer and cash to collect litter. For five hours of work, those who help clean up the streets get five cans of beer and receive €10. The Rainbow group considers that this way the alcoholics are given a better quality of life. There has been a noticeable difference in Oosterpark, a large park where many alcoholics have resided. And now there have been fewer reports of violent crimes there. One 52-year-old man says, "They used to treat us like garbage – and now we're picking up their garbage."

Yesterday, at 8:15am there was a controlled explosion by bomb disposal experts on Hemsby beach. A member of the public found a mortar bomb and reported it to the police. The bomb was thought to be historic, probably from the Second World War. And that's why part of the seafront at the village of Hemsby was closed to the public yesterday. Naturally, of course, the device had to be disposed of. But the decisive operation was afterwards when the Explosive Ordnance Disposal Team made a thorough check that there was no other bomb in the area. And then the beach was reopened.

Although the regional airline Longanair will continue to operate flights between Westray and Papa Westray islands, it will have to fight off competition from two rival firms. The distance between the two locations stands at slightly more than a mile and the trip takes 47 seconds. The eight-seat aircraft also transported pupils from Papa Westray to Westray Island Junior High in 2009 when the ordinary ferry service was stopped for repairs to the boat. The travel writer Bill Bryson cited Papa Westray as one of his favourite places in Britain.
